26	In our time, girls were only supposed to do stereotypical girly things like making dinner, scrubbing floors, taking care of children, and, if they were princesses, getting abducted by mythical creatures. ...However, Belinda's calendar wouldn't look like that, because she was an iconoclast.
145	"Let me get this straight," Belinda said. "You could have rescued yourself at any time, but you stayed because society has taught you that you had to wait for a man to come and save you?" "Yes!" Princess Grace said brightly. "And then we will get married and have the most beautiful wedding in history!"
166	Princesses don't always need a hero to rescue them- and if they do, they're under no legal obligation to fall in love with that person.
166	Because, sadly, in my time, no one really lives Happily Ever After. That's just something storybooks say. In reality, we're merely Happy for the Time Being.
